In the midst of their fame and accomplishments, an unwelcomed addition served to pose a problem; a child was born to the Proprietors. Without the supervision and with the examples set by her parents, the child grew up rich and wild. Her carefree lifestyle being such that she was never cognizant of the magnitude of her parents business affairs or influence and on the whole, showed absolutely no interest Then to be thrust into the family s business prematurely, through no fault of her own, there was no way for her to envision the responsibilities that went with her inheritance, as a result of the demise of her parents, in what was one of the world s worst disasters.
