Not illustrated. 1879 Excerpt: .pottery of different kinds, which he classifies in four groups: grey pottery, cream-coloured pottery, yellowv pottery and red glazed ware, with ornamentation in relief (Samian ware); this ornamentation constitutes, in my opinion, the only distinctive feature of the pottery made at Saguntum. Remains of this pottcry are very frequently found in the ruins of former Roman cities; a much largcr numbr of specimens of all kinds have appeared since Count Lumiaries wrote his book, none however differ materially from the terra-cottas of the Roman period found in Italy, or in other countries. Some of the marks are identical with those given by Birch and several authors who SAMIAN BOWL. have written on Roman pottery; hence it would appear that this industry was imported into Spain, or the forms and marks copied there to a very large extent. The number of inscriptions and potters marks met with...
