Viking, 2009. Book Condition: New. Brand New, Unread Copy in Perfect Condition. A+ Customer Service! Summary: " THE PIANO TEACHER is laced with intrigue.Readers will be enthralled by Lee's depiction of Will's relationships with his two lovers - "Claire, with her blond and familiar femininity, English rose to Trudy's exotic scorpion" - and the unsparing way Lee unravels them." - New York Times Book Review "Evocative, poignant and skillfully crafted, THE PIANO TEACHER is more than an epic tale of war and a tangled, tortured love story. It is the kind of novel one consumes in great, greedy gulps, pausing (grudgingly) only when absolutely necessary .If we measure the skill of a fiction writer by her ability to create characters and atmosphere so effortlessly real, so alive on the page, that the reader feels a sense of participatory anxiety -as if the act of reading gives one the power to somehow influence the outcome of purely imaginary events - then Lee should be counted among the very best in recent memory." - Chicago Tribune "Lee delivers a standout debut.The rippling of past actions through to the present lends the narrative layers of intrigue and more than a few unexpected twists. Lee covers a little- known time in Chinese history without melodrama, and deconstructs without judgment the choices people make in order to live one more day under torturous circumstances." - Publishers Weekly (Starred) "War, love, betrayal - an exquisite fugue of a first novel.Intensely readable." - O, The Oprah Magazine ".the novel is sustained by elegant prose and a terrific sense of place. As Graham Greene evoked Vietnam in The Quiet American , Lee, born and raised in Hong Kong long after the war, captures the city as it was during World War II, its glittering veneer barely masking the...
