Excerpt: .Jones and Elbury went out, when they dragged their prey through a hole in the skilling, and taking him upon their shoulders, carried him to the pit, threw him in, and covered him over with green boughs, and then returned to their company, and kept up jovial mirth till after midnight. fThe Providence of God appears singularly in bringing this horrid murder to light. A man had been at work for several days upon the ground round this pit, and in the evening used to leave his hoe in the pit. Going to work the next morning, and looking for the hoe, he was surprized to see so many green boughs laid over the pit; suspecting something was there planted, i.e., some property that had been stolen was concealed, he put in his hoe, and removed the boughs, when he immediately saw the hand of a dead man. He then called out to another man cutting firewood at a small distance. Three or four others came at the same time, Jones among the rest, and immediately charged the man that first discovered Mr. Clode in this woeful plight with the murder, and to take him into the camp a prisoner. Jones came into camp with others to bring tidings of the murder, expressed hi concern for the murder of a man he so much loved, and to whom he was indebted for his attention to him and family, in time of sickness, and again...
