GRIN Verlag. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 28 pages. Dimensions: 8.1in. x 5.7in. x 0.2in. Seminar paper from the year 2002 in the subject English Language and Literature Studies - Literature, grade: 1, 0, University of Potsdam, course: New Women in the 19th Century, language: English, abstract: Im not really out to prove anything. In fact, its all done tongue-in-cheek. An imaginative reading, I guess you could say. This is what Paul Auster (the character) says to Daniel Quinn in Austers novel City of Glass about his essay on Don Quixote. The following paper on Austers novel City of Glass is not written tongue-in-cheek but it is adventurous nonetheless. Based on Linda Hentschels theory of pornotopical techniques of looking, I will concentrate my reading of Austers text on aspects orientated towards gender, space, self and subjectivity. I am going to take up Hentschels ideas of space, especially in regard to urban space, the city, and also her ideas of how subjectivity is constructed along gendered lines. I will try to show that although Austers text challenges and destabilizes ideas and concepts like rationality, language and body, it keeps to a common gender model. Women as characters are visibly absent from the...
